GignoSystem America Launch of Game Contents for Mobile Phones through Cingular Wireless

On December 17, 2005 (local time), GignoSystem America Inc. (GignoSystem America HQ: Seattle, U.S.A.), a wholly owned subsidiary of GignoSystem Japan, Inc. (HQ: Chiyoda-ku, Tokyo; President & CEO: Keiko Iida), launched game contents for mobile phones using service provided by Cingular Wireless (HQ: Atlanta, U.S.A.), which is the largest mobile communications provider in America.

The game "The Invisible Man," which is currently available, is based on the science fiction novel "The Invisible Man" written by H.G. Wells in 1897, who also wrote "The War of the Worlds," and "The Time Machine." The setting is London in 1899. The main character, "The Invisible Man," walks the streets of London in order to find the chemicals he needs to make himself visible again. All the while, police is chasing him. This is an exciting role-playing game.

When he walks along the streets, he wraps himself in bandages and wears a coat and hat so that the police are hard to catch him. The player must carefully avoid traps on the streets during the game. The screen is similar to a 3D screen, so trees on the street and buildings appear three-dimensional. The invisible man carries luggage-containing clothes for disguising his appearance. If he is able to find the chemicals he needs within the time limit without being caught by the police, the player can win the game.
